President Trump says he finds it "bothersome" that Robert Mueller, the special counsel investigating Russian meddling in the 2016 election, is "very good friends" with fired FBI Director James Comey.

Journalist and author Garrett Graff (@vermontgmg) talks with Here & Now's Robin Young about the history between the two men, including that famous confrontation in the hospital room of Attorney General John Ashcroft.

Rumors are that Comey is planning assassination of Donald Trump

Russian intelligence, chinese intelligence, mossad and others have gathered information and revealed to an anonymous source that Comey is planning an assassination of US President Donald Trump as revenge for firing him. This is no reality TV, Donald Trump. You messed with the wrong guy.

<https://www.bostonglobe.com/opinion/2017/07/16/donald-trump-and-john-kennedy-are-more-similar-than-you-think/7DpyArq65OzXxAJoLbhaKJ/story.html>

It is much worse than you thought. It is much, much worse.

I can reveal that the president is a serial philanderer who is compulsively unfaithful to his wife. He suffers from severe medical problems, which he and his staff are concealing from the press. One of his mistresses is also romantically involved with a notorious gangster.

Speaking of organized crime, I understand that his campaign, to get elected, called on the Mafia for assistance. He intends to appoint his brother to the key position of attorney general. They plan to wiretap human rights activists.

In foreign policy, the story is even worse. He is planning an invasion of a hostile country, which is almost certain to fail disastrously. He has established a secret back-channel which he intends to use in times of crisis to communicate secretly with the Kremlin. Yet he is willing to risk nuclear war. And he has no objection to the assassination of political enemies and coups against allied governments.

There are resemblances between President Trump's recent Warsaw speech and the speeches Kennedy made in Europe, which routinely extolled the benefits of Western civilization. But the resemblances between the two presidents are more than merely superficial. The fortunes of the Kennedy and Trump families were made in a similarly disreputable ways. Kennedy and Trump alike used family members as political proxies. Thus far, however, Trump has done nothing to match the skullduggery and recklessness of his fondly remembered predecessor.

Perhaps Trump's Cuban missile crisis is on its way, in North Korea. Perhaps he plans overseas coups to match Kennedy's in Saigon. We shall see. So far, what the Trump presidency has revealed most clearly is not the way the presidency has changed as an institution, but the way the American press has changed.

The Defense of the FBI Against Donald Trump Has to Start Now

The president's nomination of Christopher Wray as FBI director threatens permanent damage to the institution. It's up to the Senate to stop him.

<http://foreignpolicy.com/2017/07/11/the-defense-of-the-fbi-against-donald-trump-has-to-start-now/>

Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell (R-Ky.) is reportedly hoping to confirm President Trump's pick to lead the FBI, Christopher Wray, before lawmakers leave Washington for the August recess.
